Fishing in Bigfork, Montana

On the shores of Bigfork, Montana are some of the best fishing areas on the northeast side of the lake. From Bigfork south to Yellow bay and further to Blue bay are some of the cleanest and deepest waters of the lake which harbors some of the best trophy lake fishing in the lower 48. Most of the larger reservoirs are better fished with boats and conventional trolling or jigging, but occasionally some of these fish will move up in the shallows where a stealthy shore angler can have banner days.

Regardless of fishing preference, there is a nice fishing spot to be found on Flathead Lake. Bigfork Montana is home to many talented and experienced guides that can facilitate great fishing, but don't miss the opportunities to just wander off yourself.

The Bigfork area also has fantastic hiking trails. A longer twenty mile hike into the peaks and truly be humbled by the grand beauty. There are also plenty of spots where the family can drive up, set out the lawn chairs and tent, and expect to be successful and have a good time.

Prime Time Fishing Opportunities: Flathead Lake: April through November
